No town can realize the fullest extent of prosperity without team work.

It is as impossible for a town to prosper greatly where the citizens are not working harmoniously to that end as it is for a team to pull a load where one horse is expected to pull the entire load and carry along the other horse. Only when the team pulls harmoniously together can the best progress be expected.

The Democrats have won a great victory, but not so great as would appear at a casual glance. Wilson and Marshall will have the biggest majority ever given presidential candidates in the electoral college, but they won in almost all of the states outside of the solid South on pluralities and not on majorities. Four years ago on the popular vote Taft had a lead of 1,208,894 over Bryan and 469,374 over all candidates. This year Wilson is nearly 2,000,000 votes behind the total vote for Roosevelt and Taft, both of whom stood for protection. The result of a victory through pluralities was inevitable with the Republican party split in two by the Roosevelt bolt.

THE RESULT.

Governor Wilson wins the Presidency though the division of his natural opponents. He did not inspire enthusiasm or show himself a stronger candidate than Mr. Bryan. He owes his victory not to superior public confidence in himself or the Democracy, but to Mr. Roosevelt's desire to wreck the Republican party the instant he could not rule it. Inspired by over-weening ambition and personal animosity, Mr. Roosevelt turned against the party which had given him the highest honors and through which he had obtained his marvelous hold on the popular imagination. Its leaders and policies were the leaders and policies which he had long commended, and he stood ready to take a nomination from it if he could. But when he decided to depart from its historic traditions of loyalty to representative government under fixed constitutional guarantees and an independent judiciary and take up radical and revolutionary doctrines which he had opposed along with it until he saw in them a suitable instrument of personal aggrandizement, he devoted his energies to tearing down the structure built by Lincoln, Seaward, Grant, Garfield and McKinley which has ever been the home of liberty and constructive statesmanship. He has brought the party to defeat. Perhaps he takes pride in his achievement, conscious that

"The aspiring youth that fired the Ephesian dome"

Outlives in fame the pious fool that raised it."

But in the eyes of the world such fame, with its trail of abandoned principles is a melancholy exchange for the universal admiration for a man who after exerting his highest power in the republic, achieving great things and performing great services, retired to private life commending to the people the wisdom of the tradition which forbade that he should again be President.

Mr. Taft in his defeat may justly feel satisfaction in having achieved something greater than a re-election. He has stood faithful to principle. He has held the Republican party true to its noble traditions. He has prevented the judicial power of the country from being made subservient to the changing whims of temporary majorities. He has preserved to the powerless the guarantees of personal liberty against the tyranny of passion. He has moved serene amid misrepresentation and abuse, discharging his duty as he saw it and refusing to do anything for spectacular political effect at a time when demagoguery was in demand. He will turn over to his successor the administration of a country whose laws were never before so well enforced, whose expenditures have been cut down, whose governmental methods have been systematized and made unprecedentedly efficient, whose general prosperity and happiness are at a high pitch. His trust is faithfully discharged.

As for Mr. Wilson, he has large if indefinite promises to redeem. He is to reduce the cost of living without reducing the stream of individual income. He is radically to cut down the tariff without injuring business. He is to abolish trusts and restore general competition. He is to carry out as a sacred pledge the radical platform which Mr. Bryan made for him at Baltimore. Behind him will be a Congress as undisciplined and as hard to lead in sane paths as that which confronted Mr. Cleveland. His task is difficult. That he may perform it with credit to himself and honor to the country is our most sincere wish.—(New York Tribune.)

200 LOCAL AMATEURS IN THE CAST

Fine Performance of "The Pied Piper of Hamelin" Before Large Audience Last Evening—Will Be Repeated Tonight

Nothing but complimentary remarks were heard last evening as the large audience filled out of the Auditorium after watching the first presentation of "The Pied Piper of Hamelin," which was given under the management of the Brattleboro Woman's club and under the general direction of Miss Elma M. Eager of Deerfield, Mass. Another performance will be given this evening at 8 o'clock and a matinee tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. The cast of the production consists of nearly 200 persons, and many of Brattleboro's old favorites were seen in pleasing parts while others who had not appeared in theatricals promised well for future entertainments of a similar nature. "The Pied Piper of Hamelin" is a musical play and spectacle adapted from the poem of Robert Browning by Miss Margaret MacLaren Eager, who had charge of the presentation of the pageant last June.

The program was interspersed with singing and dancing and from the rise of the curtain until its fall on the final tableau the audience found something of interest on the stage. Many of the numbers consisted of songs and dances by children, who did their work to perfection, while others were performed by older persons, who entered into the story and play with life and vivacity that added to its interest.

Frederic C. Adams as the Pied Piper gave a pleasing interpretation of the part. His singing was up to his usual high standard and his dance just before he enticed the rats to the river Weser was particularly good. Frank H. Brasor as the mayor of Hamelin gave a fine performance of his part as a blustering official and it appealed to the audience. The arrogant way he carried himself and the market place was typical of an official who was "getting by" on a "bust." Mr. Brasor has not been seen in local productions in a long time, but his work last night was equal to that which has won him laurels in other performances. He has lost none of the art of pleasing the audience by his singing. Ephraim H. Crane was the first coultier and played the part in a very entertaining way. His song, "Fiddle-de-dee," was given with an enthusiastic encore.

Samuel M. Eager as Ragout had a difficult part, which he rendered acceptably and with good judgment. Besides being stage director of the performance Mr. Eager took the part of short notes and was applauded. His dance with the rat, Raymond Wells, was one of the best features of the production and the boy's work was exceptionally good. Mr. Eager also took the part of a peasant and had a short song. Mrs. Wyles Russell as Katrina sang the lullaby in a sweet voice and rendered it very efficiently. Beatrice Bennett as Lena, sang a very pretty girl, did her part especially well. The audience was pleased with her work. Winifred Cain, as Lena, sang her solo charmingly and Dorothy Vandevan as a village child, Paul, who was pleasing as the lame boy, she did not overdo the part of the unfortunate lad, which might easily have been done, and through the entire production the audience watched her work with interest. Martha Howe as the flower vender made a decidedly favorable impression.

The curtain rose showing the market place at Hamelin with men and women bargaining at the stands. Everybody was in high spirits and the gay costumes made a pretty picture. The children executed a dance while the little lame boy stood near and watched them at play. Suddenly from all corners of the square appeared a horde of rats. Paul, the child, with men and women a sharp battle the rats were sent scurrying back
